No decision yet in Argersinger motions

Gus Bode

Gus says:
We can never get out of court if we never get into a court.

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Arguments were heard, but no decision was made Monday on four motions filed in the three suits Jo Ann Argersinger filed against the SIU Board of Trustees after her June 5 termination as chancellor of SIUC.

Argersinger and her attorney, Ronald E. Osman, filed suit against the board in June in Williamson County Circuit Court after her termination.

Judge Bill Wilson heard arguments on the four motions Monday morning from Osman and James Bleyer, a University attorney, and said he would rule on them "as quickly as he could."

Three of the four motions heard

Arguments center on questions of jurisdiction and whether suits are against state or University

Monday were made by Bleyer on behalf of the University.

Peter Ruger, University legal counsel, said these motions asked for dismissal of the cases because they were filed in the wrong jurisdiction.

"We see those [lawsuits] as being against the state, which, by law, should have been filed in the Illinois Court of Claims," Ruger said.

If the lawsuits were found to be against the state, then the Illinois Court of Claims would have exclusive jurisdiction.

The fourth motion, filed by Osman, contends that if the suits are against the state, Bleyer should be disqualified and Illinois Attorney General Jim Ryan should be brought in on behalf of the state of Illinois.

Ruger said he thought this motion probably would be considered first because the decision on this motion could affect the decisions on the other motions.

The controversy surrounding the cases began soon after Argersinger announced at a June 3 press conference that the SIU Board of Trustees had fired her as chancellor after less than a year in the position.

Two days later, the board officially terminated her as chancellor and named John Jackson, former vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, as her interim replacement.

The basis of the arguments heard Monday was whether the lawsuits involve a state issue, which Osman contends is not the case.

Osman said the cases are not against the state, but rather against the SIU Board of Trustees, as a whole and individually.

The case also would be against the state if Argersinger was seeking monetary compensation, Osman said, but she only is seeking injunctive action.

BBC media specialist speaking to classes today

TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

In an effort to expose students to international viewpoints, Anne Sloman of the British Broadcasting Corp. will speak to classes in the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts this week.

INSTRUCTORS

• Anne Sloman will speak Sept. 13, 14 and 15 during various MCMA classes on campus. Instructors who would like to schedule a time for Sloman to speak should call Beverly Robbins at 453-7708.

Sloman is the chief political adviser to the BBC, and she advises the director general of the BBC on policy relating to political broadcasts.

MCMA Dean Joe Foote said Sloman should be an excellent speaker for students in the college.

"She has been a lecturer in our Study

Abroad Program for 12 years, and I've always been impressed with her," Foote said. "She gives MCMA students here a broader perspective

ISS locates temporary housing for international students

BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

International Students and Scholars officials developed a plan Thursday to provide temporary on-campus housing for international students, after obtaining information that temporary off-campus housing is often a hit-or-miss situation.

Fifty-two rooms in the C-wing of the Northwest Annex are available Jan. 5 through Jan. 19 for international students who arrive at SIUC without housing contracts. At the beginning of each semester, a resident assistant and one meal daily is available at a cost of $20 per night for a two-week period.

Carla Coppi, associate director of ISS, said the plan, developed in conjunction with Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Harvey Welch, should eliminate any problems international students have with finding temporary housing.

The plan comes in lieu of a Daily Egyptian investigation that uncovered several international students were turned away from temporary housing locations at Forest Hall, 820 W. Freeman St., and Ambassador Hall, 600 W. Freeman St., after the buildings became full.

While ISS helps international students without housing contracts locate temporary residences, miscommunication occurred between ISS and the international residence halls.

Although Matt Maier, owner of both Forest and Ambassador halls, said they were full prior to

Aug. 17, Coppi said she wasn't aware they were full until that day.

University Hall, 1101 S. Wall St., was then made available, but some international students were not aware of this development because they were already in flight to the United States.

As a result, a Korean student was forced to pay for a room at an area motel, and, according to Forest Hall manager Keith Hindman, three or four international students were turned away because of no space.

To complicate matters, Hindman said the number of Americans at Forest Hall increased 20 percent in this fall. Fall enrollment numbers for 1999 increased to 273 new international students at SIUC, compared with 265 in fall of 1998.

Coppi said the Northwest Annex was available to international students during the spring semester, but was discontinued because only 15 students used the service. The Northwest Annex, once an on-campus housing unit, now houses the Administrative Information System, formerly the Oracle project.

Although off-campus housing still will be an option to international students, Coppi said utilizing on-campus housing would prevent these types of problems.

"Now, no matter what time the students arrives, even if they are unannounced, we can still bring them here," Coppi said. "With this plan, I hope [the international students' arrival] will be perfect."

POLICE BLOTTER

A 24-year-old SIUC student was struck on the head with a bottle and robbed of $14 by five assailants at 11:30 p.m. Sunday at the corner of State and Stoker streets. Carbondale police said the assailants, described as five African-American men in their 20s, were last seen running west on Freeman Street. The victim said the men followed him, two of them blocked his path, took the money and then joined the other three who were waiting a short distance away. The two men who committed the robbery are each described as 5 feet 10 inches tall and 150 pounds. The victim was treated and released at Carbondale Memorial Hospital. There are no suspects in this incident, police said.

Daniel Schmidt, 22, was arrested and charged with public consumption of alcohol at 1:23 p.m. Saturday in Lot 10. University police arrested Schmidt after he allegedly disobeyed a police order. He was released on a recognizance bond.

Keith Tanner, 19, of Springfield was arrested and charged with underage consumption of alcohol at 4:11 a.m. Saturday at Abbott Hall. University police released Tanner on a notice to appear in Carbondale City Court.

An 18-year-old female resident of Schneider Hall told University police her computer was stolen from the 14th floor hub lounge between midnight Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday. The loss was estimated at $400. There are no suspects in this incident.

Founder of Law School donates $369,000

RHONDA SCJARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A $369,000 endowment to the School of Law, donated from the estate of Hiram Lesar, will be used to fund a visiting professorship or a series of lectures.

Tom Guernsey, interim vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and dean of the Law School, had "mixed feelings" about the donation left by the Law School's founding dean.

"It is a wonderful gift to the Law School, but it is sad that it came about as a result of the deaths of Hiram and his son," Guernsey said.

Lesar died in 1997 at the age of 85 and left his estate to his son Bryon who died of cancer in April. A portion of the trust is now given to the Law School, while the balance stays with the Lesar family.

Lesar's widow Barbara said her husband would be delighted to know the Law School has received the money despite their son's unfortunate and early loss to his battle with cancer.

"I know that Hiram would be just tickled," she said. "If he had more [money], he would have left more. He was very pleased and wanted everything good to happen to the Law School."

According to guidelines indicated by the Lesar estate, the endowment will be used to provide funds for the Hiram H. Lesar Distinguished Lecture series or to support a visiting professorship.

Guernsey said Law School officials have not decided exactly what they will do with the money they have received.

Lesar served as dean of the Law School from 1972 until 1980, acting as SIUC president on two occasions. In 1991, Lesar earned the Distinguished Service Award, which is the highest honor given to an employee active in University Affairs.

In March, the Law School awarded its Founders' Medal to him.

"It is just one more example of the impact Hiram had on the school," Guernsey said.

Raymond Lenz, acting vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement, said the large donation adds to the educational advancement of the Law School.

"It is a wonderful gift," Lenz said. "We are really happy with the generosity and foresight of Hiram Lesar to provide this to the School of Law."

A narrow gray plastic sheet covers the length of the east brick wall of Virginia's Antiques, 1204 Chestnut St., Murphysboro. Hidden beneath the drapery is a mural to be revealed today at 5:30 p.m. as part of Murphysboro's 48th Annual Apple Festival.

The only lead about the masked artwork is that it is a portrayal of important events in Murphysboro's past, accompanying the Festival's theme, "A Moment in Time."

The mural was done by local artist Inga Silver and is a new attraction at the 1999 Apple Festival, which begins today and continues through Sunday.

The artist worked with Jackson County

GPSC ready to discuss technology fee tonight

TIM BARRET
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council does not think students should have to pay the proposed $25 technology fee, though he agrees with the intentions of the service, and he plans to discuss the proposed fee at tonight's GPSC meeting.

Ed Ford, GPSC president, lately has expressed concern about the use of a charge to fund technology at SIUC.

"Fees are intended to provide some type of service that's not related to what we're really doing in the classroom," Ford said.

He said he thinks other student fees are used appropriately because they fund services students are willing to pay for but are nonessential to the learning environment, such as the Recreation Center.

Technology, however, is instrumental for

GPSC MEETING

GPSC will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

instructional purposes and should be funded by the state, Ford said.

The committee that drafted the fee proposal set forth plans to improve Internet access, add e-mail stations and increase the flexibility of computer lab hours at the University.

However, a fee advisory board ultimately will make the decision as to how the generated funds, an estimated $900,000, will be allocated.

NATION

Project threatens condors

WASHINGTON

The National Audubon Society took aim Monday at a wind energy project on the northern fringe of Los Angeles County within the historical habitat of the endangered California condor.

The proposed wind farm pits two of California's high-priority environmental causes — promoting renewable energy and saving endangered species — against one other. As part of an aggressive new effort to provide more renewable energy to Californians, the state government last year awarded $7 million to the Houston-based Enron Wind Corp. to construct the wind farm off Interstate 5 on a hill above Gorman, a few miles north of Pyramid Lake in Southern California.

But the federal Fish and Wildlife Service expressed concerns that the massive wind turbines needed for the Gorman project could imperil the condors, which were reintroduced in the region at a huge cost to taxpayers after North America's largest land bird nearly became extinct in the late 1980s.

Our Word

Immaturity leads to restrictions of our freedom

The Carbondale City Council banned parking on the west side of the 500 block of South Illinois Avenue between midnight and 7 a.m. It's only the loss of three parking spaces, but this parking ban reveals a lot about the City Council's state of mind. Quite simply, they just don't trust us to behave ourselves. And with the cycle of irresponsibility often displayed on the Strip, why should they?

By and large, SIUC students are fairly responsible adults. Still, there are those few miscreants who take more pride in perpetuating a party school image by damaging private property, overturning cars and otherwise acting like fools than in establishing a University where their degree actually reflects some knowledge. These are usually some of the same people who call the Daily Egyptian Monday mornings begging to be left out of the police blotter.

The Egyptian has no sympathy for people majoring in "How To Be an Idiot." If you don't want to be recognized as a delinquent member of our community, then don't act like one.

Being drunk isn't an excuse to act irresponsibly. Your parents don't have to sign a permission slip for you to come here because, surprise, you're supposed to be an adult now. When students don't act like adults, they're not treated like adults — except when it comes to punishment.

By restricting parking on the Strip, the Council has taken away the toys you weren't playing nice with. It doesn't necessarily happen every weekend, but sooner or later, some group of drunks trying to be the life of the party and impress their friends try to overturn a car. Too often this act is accompanied by encouraging chants from the onlooking crowd.

In these occurrences, SIUC students sink about as low as possible on the maturity chain. How infantile can we act? How large a display of childishness can we perform for the city? These seem to be the questions at the forefront of every intoxicated individual who gets a thrill out of standing in the middle of a street. These are also the candid examples of a cycle that allows the city, the University and the adult world around us to jerk back on the leash of freedom. With each act of immaturity, the case against trust and adult treatment of students builds evidence, making it ever harder for those of us who do act responsibly.

Yet, through this we wonder why things stay the way they are. Why is there nothing to do in Carbondale? Why can't we park on the Strip? Why does nobody seem to listen to us when we have a genuine request or problem? Because actions speak louder than words.

So the next time you feel the urge to chant, "Tip the car," quickly follow it with, "Never trust students." And if you ever have to shout in frustration, "I'm not a kid anymore, why does everybody treat me like one?" ask yourself if you've been acting like the adult you claim to be. If you haven't, then stop blocking the path to respectability and trust for the rest of us and stay home to drink.

Students can learn a lot from each other, even how to row

Angels Among Us

ANNA BETH TRAYNOR

TRAYNOR @ SIU.EDU

I have always been a fitness buff, trying desperately to burn off the extra pounds gained through starchy dorm food, too much reading and a slow metabolism.

However, after being diagnosed with hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) this summer, I now have to worry with fighting off extra insulin.

I have been a faithful crusader of the Student Recreation Center, trying the new machines and lifting weights to ward off the unpleasantness of the condition, and trying to prevent diabetes.

Trying one of the new machines in one of the cardiovascular rooms, I glanced around. Once again, I had forgotten my headphones and strained to watch and read the dialogue on the television without my glasses.

Before too long, I grew frustrated and decided to glance around at my neighbors. Most people were busy watching the televisions. Some were stretching, while others would glance from the couches, already tired from a hard workout.

However, one conversation soon sparked my attention.

As I glanced towards the noise, I realized a young woman was teaching a student how to row. How nice, I thought, and watched her sacrifice her own workout time to help others.

The next day, I was back at the gym, sweating away, stressing about the reading I needed to be doing. As I glanced at the rowing machines, I once again saw the young woman instructing another SIUC student.

Now my curiosity was up, and I had to know what made her give up her time and body to students she did not know.

After my workout, I introduced myself to her and learned that the young woman was a graduate student and former rowing coach. She told me she was now at SIU and was disappointed that she had not seen anyone using the 10 $700 rowing machines correctly. As a former rowing coach, she couldn't stand seeing people jerk their bodies and wanted to help them.

The beauty of the coaching was that now the student was doing the coaching for free; a service which had previously helped her pay the bills as an undergraduate. She is even thinking of teaching a class on how to row.

We need all kinds of angels, especially those who teach us how to keep our outer and inner shells intact.

So, the next time you feel like bursting into "Row, Row, Row, Your Boat" and striding away through the stream of life, remember it just takes a few minutes to show your neighbor the right way to row.

MAILBOX

Look at the positive not the negative

DEAR EDITOR:

In light of recent editorial comments by Daily Egyptian staff, it is clear that an interest in recognizing the truth about international student life at SIUC is sadly lacking. Actually, the University established strong roots of support more than 50 years ago when the first international students arrived on campus.

The foreign student adviser, along with faculty, administration and community members, hosted students in their homes and at parties and receptions regularly, and special programs were designed for international wives and children.

That initiative evolved into the formal establishment of the International Friends Club (IFC), a network of more than 200 campus and community volunteers who help international students and their families make a pleasant and successful transition to life at SIUC.

The community programs coordinator position was established by the director of International Programs and Services in 1980 specifically to address the personal needs and concerns of students from abroad in a more organized fashion, and to encourage them to share their cultural perspectives with the people of Southern Illinois.

Although many colleges and universities do not provide a paid employee to coordinate special services for international students, our students may enjoy: host families, English conversation partners, cooking programs, activities for wives and families, a loan closet, a speakers bureau and an emergency response team. In addition, students may receive individual assistance with personal problems or the appropriate referral by request.

The annual Inga Solberger Grant for catastrophic medical bills helps students with financial difficulties, and the new Mary Wakeland Scholarship is awarded annually to an outstanding international student volunteer.

International Students and Scholars (ISS) office staff and volunteers lead international students step by step through a carefully planned orientation process including pre-arrival guidance, meeting them at the local airport or train station; helping them find appropriate housing; opening an official file; advising them on immigration and tax regulations, financial concerns, healthcare, community programs, and registration issues; providing shuttles to banks and shopping areas; and offering an orientation hospital room, tours of the campus and its facilities, and a variety of social activities.

ISS staff members frequently address faculty, administrative and student groups on cultural concerns by request. Advisers and faculty members readily seek personal support through ISS for students at risk. ISS staff also works cooperatively with the International Student Council throughout the year. All these services represent only the tip of the iceberg.

Instead of writing sensational editorials about one or two incidents, we would better serve the entire community by reporting the scores of positive strides made on campus every day in every department. The Egyptian would do well to publicize the many programs that are available to SIUC students each year and encourage them to participate.

International students can forgive our occasional errors, but they do not want to be herded together in a dorm or a classroom. They want to meet and interact with Americans, particularly people their own age, and experience our culture at its best.

The students from abroad bring good will and enthusiasm along with their cultural diversity. Let's receive them graciously with a spirit of friendship and cooperation. Only then will we be able to meet the hopes, dreams and expectations of the international community at SIUC.

A dozen SIUC students will learn the importance of environmental awareness at the third annual Greening of the Campus international conference Sept. 30 through Oct. 2 at Ball State University in Indiana.

The students, who have yet to be chosen, are going as part of Southern Sustainability, an environmental organization on campus.

Charles Smith, a graduate student who works with Southern Sustainability as a volunteer, said he sees his role with the group as that of an advocate.

"The problem is we have to get people to change their behavior," said Smith. "Our primary focus is to get all the environmentally oriented student organizations together through campus-type activities."

The Greening of the Campus is a gathering of people from around the world who are concerned with creating new ideas and initiatives involving environmental awareness. The goal is for colleges and universities to become more active in environmental issues.

Although this is Southern Sustainability's first conference, more than 200 participants from 29 states and five countries attended the conference in past years.

"We'd like to get everyone environmentally conscious," said Hugh Muldoon, one of the sustainability project managers. "Why should any student graduate from this University without having that kind of awareness?"

The group is composed of 30 people, including SIUC faculty, students and community leaders.

The conference was first organized in April 1996 at Ball State University. Getting students active in environmental issues is a key goal of Southern Sustainability, according to Dave Paprocki, one of the other project managers.

"We want to provide a chance for students to get involved," Paprocki said. "We have opportunities for students to learn skills and build their resumes."

Those skills include organizational, administrative and research skills, he said.

"Not only are we asking them to help us change things that we think are very important, but we're also offering them real work experience that they can use in a job when they leave," Paprocki said.

A simple donation can make a difference

Local families will have some extra help this month, thanks to the Mission and Values team at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

The Shawnee Crisis Pregnancy Center, 215 W. Main St., received more than $300 in donations from the hospital Wednesday in the form of cash, baby clothes, formula and supplies.

The donations will help the not-for-profit organization in its mission to assist students and community members facing the prospect of a new family. Although the center specifically caters to single mothers and unplanned pregnancies, any family in need of help is welcome.

Marsha Perfetti, director of the center, said the locations in Carbondale and Marion serve more than 15,000 families annually.

"Often times, we're in need because we have to serve so many families on such a small budget," she said.

The center offers free pregnancy tests, prenatal vitamins, diapers, maternity clothes and more to families in need. The center also provides information about adoption but does not refer clients to abortion clinics.

The Mission and Values team of Carbondale Memorial Hospital was started four years ago to contribute to charitable organizations such as the center.

David Gray, chairman of the team, said the group works to promote "respect, integrity, compassion, stewardship and quality," with fund-raisers and donations.

"We are dedicated to improving the health and well being of all the people in the communities we serve," Gray said.

Anne Gispson, a registered nurse at the hospital, coordinated the effort to collect supplies and donations for the center. Gispson suggested the Shawnee Crisis Pregnancy Center because she said they make a positive difference in the lives of people who need some help.

"I think that they provide a good service for the community," she said. "They meet the needs of people that might have never been met."

Perfetti said the supplies will be put to good use at the center where people can go for assistance and advice.

"We're here to help with practical and emotional support for those women who are experiencing an untimely pregnancy," she said.

One case contends Argersinger was denied due process and was fired in violation of the Illinois Open Meetings Act. The suit asks the court to order the board to follow the Illinois Open Meetings Act in the future.

The second case was filed on two counts. The first count contends the board violated a contract stipulation that should have allowed Argersinger to remain in the chancellor's office at least six months after being notified of her termination. The second count asks the court to order her reinstatement as chancellor.

Judge Wilson could rule that one or both of the cases could be shifted to the Illinois Court of Claims or stay in Williamson County Circuit Court, Osman said. However, Osman said he has heard of an Open Meetings Act case being filed in the Illinois Court of Claims before.

"There is certainly ample case law on either side," Osman said. "But we just asked the court to order [the SIU Board of Trustees] to do what they're supposed to do."

Though Judge Wilson did not say exactly when he would have a ruling on any of the motions, Osman said all either side could do now is wait.

"I'm not a great reader of tea leaves," Osman said. "We'll just have to wait and see what the court does."

of both British and American journalism than they would receive locally."

Foote said Sloman's extensive background gives her a substantial amount of credibility when addressing students.

"She's been in the front lines of journalism, gathering information and producing documentaries," Foote said. "Because of her broad experience, students should find what she has to say very interesting."

Beverly Robbins, a secretary in the dean's office, said Sloman will be lecturing on four different topics while at SIUC. Foote and Robbins worked together to arrange for Sloman to address SIUC students.

Robbins said topics to be discussed include: an Introduction to Ethics and BBC Journalism, the BBC in a Changing Broadcast Environment, the Political Scene in Britain and the Naked Truth, Robbins said.

Walter Jaehnig, associate professor of journalism, describes Sloman as an expert in the area of British politics and the media.

"Not only is she very charming and articulate, but she is highly knowledgeable about British politics and the media's role in covering it," Jaehnig said.

Jaehnig also said the lectures should be even more interesting because of the controversies surrounding how the BBC covers politics.

"It should be interesting, because Sloman is right at the center of the criticism surrounding the BBC," Jaehnig said. "She should give students and faculty members a good introduction to the situation overseas."

Prior to her current position, Sloman was deputy head of News and Current Affairs at the BBC, and before that, head of the Special Current Affairs Unit on BBC Radio 4.

While at Radio 4, she led a unit that produced several major BBC public affairs radio documentaries. As a reporter, Sloman covered several American presidential campaigns and reported on a wide range of other American political issues.

Sloman also co-authored several books on British parliamentary politics and has been a lecturer in SIUC's British and Global Broadcasting course since 1987.

Bradley kicks off presidential campaign in Missouri

STEVE KRASKE

KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

CRYSTAL CITY, Mo. — Democrat Bill Bradley, launching his presidential bid, stood in his small Mississippi River hometown Wednesday and pledged to tackle some of America's big problems.

"We will do fewer things, but they will be essential things, and we will do them more thoroughly," Bradley said. "I'll use the growth of the new economy and do some of the big things that need to be done in this country."

As president, Bradley said, he would propose a limited agenda to reduce child poverty, enact stiffer gun laws, make sure more Americans have health insurance and reform a campaign system dominated by wealthy special interests.

Speaking to friends, teachers, neighbors and supporters who spilled across the front yard of Crystal City High School, Bradley emphasized that as president he would help more people benefit from the soaring economy.

"In so many ways, we have failed to use our prosperity to improve the well-being of all our citizens," he said in a steady, unshuffled cadence. "I feel an urgency to seize this moment in history, to strengthen the weak and to challenge the strong to lead us into our full greatness as a nation."

He spoke of the need for a "deeper prosperity" that reaches out to people who have been left behind and helps the nation "feel rich inside as well as out."

"To me, the American dream is not just for the lucky among us. It is not just an ideal to wish on. It should be a possibility available to all."

Wednesday's kick-off speech was about laying out goals, not specifying how they would be accomplished. The candidate has promised more details this fall.

The former three-term New Jersey senator is running against Vice President Al Gore for the Democratic nomination. Although Gore is favored, Bradley has shown surprising strength.

Crystal City embraced Bradley with the warmth of an apple pie served straight from the oven. The town, so named because of a now-closed plate-glass factory, was decorated with American flags and signs urging Bradley to "give 'em hell" and offering encouragement. "It can happen" one placard read.

At one point, Bradley gestured toward the river at an empty, weeded lot where the old Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. plant once stood.

"We didn't grow corn or wheat here in Crystal City. We made glass," he remembered. "Today I want to be as clear as that glass about who I am..."

Residents said the event was the biggest thing to happen to the town of 4,000 about 30 miles south of St. Louis since the 1993 Mississippi River flood.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime type thing," said Lew Perrod of neighboring Festus.

Bradley used his 33-minute address to formally introduce himself to voters, many of whom know little about him other than he once was a star forward with the New York Knicks. Wednesday night, Bradley led reporters on a tour that included stops at the Taylor Avenue home where he grew up, a house Bradley still owns. Another stop was at the nearby Crystal City State Bank, where his father spent his career.

Bradley, 56, described himself as a small-town boy who had a paper route and could tell the time by the sound of passing trains.

He described his late father, Warren Bradley, as a man who worked his way up at the bank from a job "shining pennies" to majority shareholder. Suffering from calcified arthritis in his spine, the elder Bradley was unable to drive a car or throw a ball. His wife dressed him each day and the younger Bradley, an only child, tied his shoes.

His greatest achievement, Warren Bradley once said, was never foreclosing on a home during the Depression.

"He always managed to work something out," Bill Bradley said.

His mother, Susie Bradley, also dead, was as exuberant as his father was reserved. She taught Sunday School at the Presbyterian church across the street and organized a never-ending string of activities for her son and his friends.

As a senator, Bradley said, he tried not to hog the spotlight and sought to reach across party lines to get things done. Both attributes were present during Bradley's work on the sweeping tax-reform act of 1986 that reduced the number of tax brackets.

Two blocks west of Smyser Plaza, between 12th and Walnut streets, a crew of men set up a wooden stage for the festival.

When completed, a diverse range of events will take place on its steps, including an apple pie and apple butter contest, a banjo contest and performances by the 'Boro City Rollers and

Country Classics.

The Murphysboro Apple Festival originated in 1952 as local merchants attempted to bring people into the area during peak seasons, said Michael Ruiz, chair of the Apple Festival. The festival's name was inspired by the many apple orchards that attracted people to the town.

The popularity of the Apple Festival has grown through the years to include numerous volunteers and community members. Ruiz said the decline in the number of local apple orchards has not discouraged the spirit of the festival.

"Over the years, people from Southern Illinois and the Midwest have made Applefest an annual stop on the Southern Illinois festival circuit," Ruiz said.

Though the Apple Festival's theme changes year to year, the message of camaraderie and community remains the same for those involved.

"It's very family-oriented," Ruiz said. "You can bring the whole family in for rides, food and entertainment and not have any concerns."

The premier event for the festival is Saturday's Appletime Grand Parade in downtown Murphysboro. Beginning at 11 a.m. on 18th Street, more than 150 floats, boats and marching units will travel east to 21st Street.

"The parade is the largest parade in Southern Illinois," Ruiz said. "Friday morning people will already have their seats roped off waiting for the parade."

"It is the spotlight for this year's Applefest and a hallmark for the festival each year."

Ruiz said he is excited to witness the festival's activities which are a result of community effort and volunteer planning.

"The Murphysboro community as a whole is the main contributing factor to the success of Applefest," Ruiz said.

"Tons of work is done for the festival by volunteers. A lot of people work hard together to make this event happen."

The SIU Board of Trustees has the final vote on whether the technology fee will become reality.

As of Monday, the fee had not been placed on the agenda for October's board meeting, and it was unclear as to when the fee would be voted on, according to Sharon Holmes, executive secretary of the SIU Board of Trustees.

In April, a non-binding student vote supported the measure to add the $25 technology fee.

Graduate students voted 30-20 in favor of the fee, and undergraduate students supported the fee 647-564.

GPSC voted in April to conduct a second vote: this fall as a result of the low voter turnout.

In "other business," GPSC will decide whether to approve a fund that will allow council representatives to be paid for expenses they might incur while researching how SIUC's funding compares to other universities.

Ford said the research is needed to provide

GPSC with evidence that the University is being underfunded.

If the research proves Ford's suspicion to be correct, he said he hopes to send a group of students and faculty members to Springfield, to lobby the state legislature.

The fund will help pay for printing costs, copy expenses, phone calls and other expenditures from the research, Ford said.

Lions win 'Old-fashion bar fight' with Pitt

KIMBERLY JONES
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSAPERS

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA. — Ninety-five games or not, the Pitt-Penn State rivalry may have ventured into a new dimension on Saturday afternoon at Beaver Stadium.

"An old-fashioned bar fight in the back alley," was how Nittany Lion fullback Mike Cerimle — with sweat dripping down his forehead and a smile covering his face — described No. 2 Penn State's 20-17 escape from the Panthers.

And who could argue? The tilt, Penn State's seventh straight victory in a series that is not scheduled to continue past next season, featured a trio of game-changing interceptions, few rushing yards by either side, a timely sack by Lion defensive tackle David Fleischhauer and a game-clinching blocked field goal attempt on the second-to-last play by linebacker LaVar Arrington.

Speaking of Arrington, he also made an interception that went for naught and provided one of the contest's more entertaining side shows when he and Pitt punter Greg DeBolt engaged in a couple of special teams battles that resembled wrestling matches, one of which resulted in not one but two personal fouls against Penn State.

"If Pitt didn't make a statement about this being a rivalry today, then I don't know what a rivalry is," said Arrington, a Pittsburgh native who didn't necessarily make a statement about his grappling ability. Said he of the double-flagged skirmish: "I knocked the punter down (and) I was laying on him." Of snuffing Nick Lotz's 52-yard field goal attempt with five seconds remaining, Arrington grinned. "I've gotta block it," was what ran through his mind before the ball was snapped. "But thinking and doing are two different things," he added.

What the Nittany Lions did was win when it wasn't easy for them, as had been the case in a pair of season-opening matings over Arizona and Akron.

"We didn't do everything right," said Penn State tight end Tony Stewart, who made his first reception of the season, "but we showed we're tough and we got things done when we had to."

First, the offense did so, driving 77 yards after Pitt had forged a 17-17 tie with 4:34 to go on a 42-yard touchdown reception by Julius Dixon. Penn State's big play of its final series — and possibly its biggest play of the game — was a splendid pass from Kevin Thompson to Eddie Drummond that covered 51 yards and put the Nittany Lions at the Pitt 11.

Thompson finished 17 for 29 for 232 yards with two interceptions. One pick in the third quarter resulted in a Pitt field goal. Another came a quarter later at the Pitt 13, on the possession following Arrington's interception.

Still, Thompson rebounded to complete the pass that mattered most. "Kevin threw a great ball, it was easy for me," said Drummond, a sophomore who scored his first career touchdown against Akron. "All I had to do was adjust to the ball and catch it."

After three rushing plays netted four yards — and set the ball on the left hash mark — Travis Fomey booted a 24-yard field goal for the winning points with 80 seconds remaining.

"You've gotta be able to win a football game like this if you have any aspirations," Penn State coach Joe Paterno said. Then it was the Penn State defense's turn. And, after Pitt's Hank Poteat returned the kickoff 47 yards to midfield, the Panthers appeared to be sitting pretty.

"I don't know what happened on that last (return)," Paterno said. Penn State linebacker Brandon Short had an idea.

"Hank almost won the game for them," he said. So did John Turman. The Pitt quarterback, a junior college transfer making his first career start, completed a pass to Latif Grim for 25 yards to the Lion 25. After an incomplete and with 54 seconds to go, Penn State called time.

Considering that the two teams combined for just 120 yards rushing, the Nittany Lions figured the Panthers would continue to try to pass. They were ready.

"This is what we get into the game for," Short said. "A team's driving on you and you have to stop them to win the game."

"You just need to go out there and expect to win," said linebacker Mac Morrison. "I think we did that."

Following another incomplete, Fleischhauer dropped Turman for a 10-yard loss and drew this reaction from Arrington: "I just kept telling (Fleischhauer) that I love him. That was just a great effort on his part." It was an inauspicious end to Turman's fine day; he was 19 for 35 for 316 yards, with two touchdowns and an interception and won the Coogan Award as the game's MVP.

"We showed," Turman said, "that our offense has a spark." As the clock ticked and the Panthers lined up for a field goal try — Pitt had exhausted its final timeout early in the fourth quarter — the crowd of 96,127 was on its feet.

The kick entered the air, and defensive end Courtney Brown and Arrington leaped. Arrington's outstretched right hand deflected it, ending the threat of overtime, which would have been a first in Paterno's 50-year coaching career.

"It was a tremendous play," Brown said. "C-@ blessed us." Perhaps it was Pitt coach Walt Harris, whose squad is 14 scholarship players shy of the NCAA's 85-man limit, who could have used the blessing. The Panthers' starting linemen gave up 29 pounds per player to Penn State's offensive line.

"Doggone it," Harris said. "Our guys played their butts off. There was no disputing that by the Nittany Lions."

"I'll take nothing away from the University of Pittsburgh," said Penn State defensive end Justin Kurpekis, who is from Pittsburgh. "They played unbelievable. It's too bad we only have one (game against the Panthers) left." Cerimle, the high-intensity junior whose 11-yard reception from Rashard Casey gave Penn State a 7-0 lead in the first quarter, said he "loved it today" on the field. "But I don't ever want to be in that situation again," he quickly added. "None of us do."

Agassi continues comeback by winning U.S. Open

BILL FLEISCHMAN
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSAPERS

NEW YORK — Good show, guys.

Following rousing semifinals, the U.S. Open men's final is often anticlimactic. Not this year.

No. 2 seed Andre Agassi climbed off the Arthur Ashe Stadium hardcourt to beat seventh-seeded Todd Martin Sunday night, 6-4, 6-7 (5-7), 6-7 (2-7), 6-3, 6-2, to gain his second U.S. Open title.

The last major tournament final of the millennium was worthy of champagne toasts for both players.

Since filing for divorce from actress Brooke Shields in April, Agassi has won the U.S. Open and French Open, and was runner-up to Pete Sampras at Wimbledon. In rising his Grand Slam tournament title total to five, Agassi won two majors in one year for the first time.

Single life has allowed him to make a serious commitment to tennis again. Agassi's ranking has rocketed from No. 141 to No. 1.

Any day, Agassi, 29, will show up on billboards advocating bachelorhood.

Former touring pro Brad Gilbert has directed Agassi's comeback. Two years ago, Gilbert said Agassi's "agony was self-inflicted. I told him he had a lot left. If he rededicated himself, he'd get everything back."

Said Agassi: "I had to make a choice: play the game or quit. If I was going to play, I had to do a lot of work."

Agassi worked with his personal trainer, Gil Reyes, for hours daily in the broiling Nevada sun. He lifted weights and ran up and down a 3,200-foot hill he named "Magic Mountain."

Martin, appearing in his second major tournament final, moved through the top half of the Open draw, vacated by, four-time Open champion Pete Sampras.

The top-seeded Sampras withdrew prior to his first match with a herniated disk. Martin breezed past unseeded Cedric Pioline, 6-4, 6-1, 6-2, in the semis.

Martin, also 29, is experiencing an Agassi-like resurgence. Throughout his career, Martin has been hampered by injuries. The former Northwestern University student gained momentum toward the final with his Round of 16 victory over Greg Rusedski. After dropping the first two sets, Martin won in one of the tournament's most remarkable matches.

"I feel very good about the way I played," Martin said. "I lost to a better player."

The 6-6 Martin hit 77 winners to 45 by Agassi. However, Martin's unforced errors more than doubled Agassi's, 60 to 23.

Agassi's amazingly low unforced-error total wasn't his only stunning statistic. He also went the entire 3-hour, 23-minute match without suffering a service break.

"I'm just thrilled to be in this situation," said Agassi, a 1-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3 winner over No. 3 seed Yevgeny Kafelnikov in the semifinals. "(Martin) gave me a lot to worry about. He was not only serving great, he was volleying magnificently."

After dominating the second- and third-set tiebreakers, Martin's serve was broken in the third game of the fourth set. Agassi saved two break points in the eighth game.

Any question about the outcome was decided in the second game of the final set when Agassi broke Martin's serve at love with a stinging backhand service return down the line.

Martin also was broken at love in the final game. After Martin hit a backhand into the net, Agassi raised both arms and flashed a smile from here to Las Vegas for his adoring fans.

Explaining the slip in his serving effectiveness, Martin said, "I lost my legs a little."

Martin's biggest problem was dealing with the "relentless pressure" of Agassi. Said Martin: "Over five sets, under this type of pressure, that's quite an achievement."

If Agassi had continued at his mid-1990s level, he would have stayed on the same elevated level as Sampras, who has a record-tying 12 major titles. But Agassi said he has no regrets.

"If it wasn't for those valleys, then these peaks would be this high," he said. "It's kind of how my spirit has always worked."

'Jake The Snake' comes through again for Cards

KEVIN MULLIGAN
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSAPERS

PHILADELPHIA — Some Cardinals said they could just feel it.

The red jerseys in the huddle with Jake Plummer in the second half knew it.

They have been there before with their 24-year-old quarterback.

"The man had it back," said halfback Adrian Murrell. "When an offense starts to click, you just know it. And just like that... we knew we were ready to finally start playing some ball."

Plummer has that special ingredient that eventually separates the also-ran and the good from the very good and the great in the NFL: an infectious confidence and ability to lead by doing.

It was on display at Veterans Stadium again Sunday when Arizona most needed it. Just like that time arrived after Plummer's fourth consecutive completion — a harmless, 8-yard hookup with Frank Sanders — on Arizona's opening drive of the second half.

"We started clicking," Plummer said, "and we knew we'd be OK if we stayed with it."

Plummer said he kept telling his teammates to believe, believe, believe.

With one 8-yard pass, life and confidence was injected into an offense that had every reason known in the football world to come out flatter than Indiana. Its vital parts had not been on the field together in preseason, due to holdouts, injuries and a car wreck.

Plummer, for instance, had his preseason practice/playing time cut dramatically by a hyperextended thumb injury. He overcame a horrible first half — 10-for-25 (78 yards), three interceptions — to complete 15 of 23 for 196 yards in the second half as the Cardinals rallied from a 24-6 halftime deficit to stun the Eagles, 25-24.

"We just never stopped believing," said Plummer, outside a jubilant Cardinals locker room. "Never."

No. 16's brief NFL history no doubt had a little something to do with that "Jake the Snake" led the Cards to three consecutive come-from-behind victories in their stretch charge to the NFC playoffs last season. His teammates have seen him pull rabbits from hats and make victories appear from nowhere.

Add Sunday's comeback to the top of his short list of magic acts. If you didn't see it happen, you'll have a hard time believing how the Eagles authored a sad first chapter to their supposed new beginning.

"I didn't even have to say it, but I did," Plummer said. "There were, like, 12 minutes left, we were down like 15 (actually, 24-15), and I said, 'Hey, don't worry about it. We're right in this game.'"

Gator too much for Central Florida

CHRIS HARRY
KNIGHT-RIDER NEWSPAPERS

GAINESVILLE, FLA. — The University of Florida needed a breakout game heading into the defining week of its season.

Unfortunately for the University of Central Florida Knights, they just happened to be in the way.

The fourth-ranked Gators exited their annual doubleheader of preseason pancakes with a 58-27 clubbing Saturday night of overmatched UCF.

A crowd of 85,346 came to Florida Field hoping for an utter blowout but had to settle for a routine rout. No problem there. They just wanted this game to be over.

And the hype for the next one to officially begin.

Quarterback Doug Johnson shook off an early interception to throw for four touchdowns, three going to wide receiver Travis Taylor, in just one half of action, as the Gators (2-0) rolled up 501 yards of total offense and forced four turnovers by the Knights (0-2) in winning their NCAA-best 29th consecutive game at "the Swamp."

The game closed out UF's customary two rounds of September preliminary bouts.

Now, on to the main event.

Defending National Champion Tennessee, seemingly more confident than ever before, comes to town this weekend. The winner will seize command of the Southeastern Conference Eastern Division and leave the other to soak in thoughts of a season without a title.

"Now the fun begins," UF senior center Corey Yarbrough said. "Tennessee's players have been talking up there. It's time to go play some football."

And it will be much more inspired football than what Florida demonstrated last week against Western Michigan or against the Knights, who thoroughly out-played the backup Gators after halftime.

"Shoot, you can throw out these first two," said UF Coach Steve Spurrier, who was disgusted with the play of his reserves, but pleased with what happened with the starters on the field for a first half that ended with the Gators headed for the locker room leading 49-14. "All we did was win us a couple ballgames without losing too much in the rankings. If Tennessee had played today, they'd be saying the same thing."

Perhaps, but the theme was different in the visitors' locker room. For the Knights, nothing could be bigger than playing the state's flagship school, but they'll hardly have time to reflect on their rather respectable showing before traveling to Georgia Tech this week (not to mention Georgia the following week).

With junior quarterback Vic Penn at the controls, UCF moved the ball against the bigger and badder Gators.

The Knights finished with 447 total yards, as Penn completed 34 of 55 passes for 379 yards, three touchdowns and one interception.

More than half his yardage and both his scoring tosses came against UF's first-team defense. So did Edward Mack's 42-yard run at 9:32 of the first quarter that gave the Knights a 7-0 lead. It was similar to last week, when UCF jumped to a one-touchdown lead on Purdue.

Unlike that game, when things only got worst, the Knights had several bright spots in college football's most hostile venue.

"We can take plenty of positives from this game," said Penn, who led his teammates before the largest crowd ever to witness a UCF game. "There's good and bad in this game. I think on offense there's more good than there is bad."

Stunned but not rattled after the Knights took the 7-0 lead, the Gators evened the score quickly.

Using his reserve tailbacks — Robert Gillespie, came underneath for a 33-yard catch-and-run, and Bo Carroll ran twice for 30 yards — Johnson drove UF quickly and tied things with a 15-yard pass to a wideopen Taylor on a third-and-15.

From there, UCF got generous. Like the Gators needed it. First, Penn and fullback Page Sessions missed an exchange on a third-and-one from their 24, with defensive end Derrick Chambers covering the ball at the Knights' 23.

Johnson needed seven seconds to fire a 23-yard touchdown to Darrell Jackson, another wideopen Gator, to push UF to its first lead at 14-7.

The second Knights blunder came following a sack by Florida linebacker Teddy Sims, back from a one-game suspension.

The play helped set up a fourth down from UCF's 3, where hobbled punter Javier Beorlegui had to field a high snap from Mike Hedge and hurried to get off his kick. It went 11 yards.

Two Earnest Graham carries moved the ball to the 1, where Johnson dropped and lobbed a fade pass for Taylor, who tight roped the endzone sideline for the score and 21-7 advantage.

Costly Mistake No. 3 came courtesy of the UCF defense when it jumped offside on a fourth-and-3 to award the Gators a first down. Johnson answered with a perfect 31-yard touchdown strike to Taylor on an out-and-out that made it 28-7 just three minutes in to the second quarter.

The margin quickly went to 35-7 when UCF went three-and-out — thanks to a pair of drops on nicely thrown Penn passes — and Florida stormed Beorlegui with freshman Todd Johnson blocking the kick into the end zone and classmate Marquis Westbrook covering it for the touchdown.

"We can take plenty of positives from this game. There's good and bad in this game. I think on offense there's more good than there is bad."

always a major feather in the cap of Division I-AA teams.

Western Illinois University knocked off Northern Illinois University and the University of Northern Iowa dealt an embarrassing blow to Ohio University last weekend.

So who is the cream of the crop in this feisty seven-team league?

Take your pick.

Illinois State University was slated to win the league, and has burst to a 2-0 start while outscoring two undermanned opponents 96-16.

It should be interesting to see how the high-flying Redbirds fare when they travel to Big Ten country and the University of Minnesota this Saturday.

Western Illinois, which has won the Gateway two years running, followed up its opening win over the NIU Huskies by humiliating Mississippi Valley State University 77-7.

Northern Iowa's 36-21 win over Ohio came on the heels of a blowout victory at nationally ranked Division I-AA power McKeesport State University in the Panthers' first game.

Elsewhere, Youngstown State University figures to be their customary solid bunch, with the lone Penguin loss of the year coming in the form of a 46-28 loss at Western Michigan University.

Likewise, Southwest Missouri State's one loss was to a Division I-A team — the University of Tulsa — and the talented Bears will play hard-nosed football behind former Western Illinois coach Randy Ball.

It's not fair to judge 0-2 Indiana State University quite yet.

The Sycamores have faced Iowa State University and the University of Oklahoma out of the rugged Big Twelve Conference.

Look for Indiana State to redeem themselves once lined up against less imposing opponents. The bottom line is, once the conference schedule is underway, the Salukis will have to pick up their game.

The Salukis get another reprieve from Gateway play this week, but will likely be in a dogfight with Eastern Illinois University Saturday — their third consecutive Ohio Valley Conference challenger.

The first taste of league play comes Sept. 25, when Coach Q's squad travels to Northern Iowa.

Until then, SIU can only continue to improve in practice and try to protect their perfect record this week in Charleston.

Maybe a peek at the scoreboard is not advisable for the Salukis if they are looking for a confidence boost, as their conference brethren are playing for keeps.

Time will tell if the Salukis belong among the Gateway elite, or whether the Salukis will be caught in the wrong league at the wrong time.

Human error could not keep two SIU women's cross country team members out of the record books and the Salukis atop the leader board in Friday's Bradley Invitational in Peoria.

SIU senior Jenny Monaco (18:09) and freshman Erin Simone (18:11) were not only good enough to place them fourth and fifth, respectively, but they also broke into the SIU record books as two of the top-20 finishers in school history.

Although the times recorded are solid, they were inaccurate because of a faulty timer. According to head coach Don DeNoon, each runner's time should have placed about three seconds faster.

If the times were accurate, Monaco and Simone would have placed higher on the all-time list.

While they did not crack the record books, freshman Katie Mehan (18:15), and seniors Erin Leahy (18:19) and Joy Cutrano (18:26) carried the rest of the five-member pack that finished in fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth places. Seventeen seconds separated the runners, and the Salukis claimed their second consecutive victory.

"The 17-second spread between the top five runners is phenomenal," DeNoon said about the team's times. "It was a good performance altogether by the whole team."

The Salukis' fellow Missouri Valley Conference competitors displayed strong performances as well, as Bradley University finished second, Indiana State University placed third, Illinois State University finished fourth, and Northern Iowa finished sixth.

The Redbirds' Stacia Beste led all runners with a time of 17:20.

Other SIU finishers included junior Becky Cox, who placed 16th (18:49), freshman Katie Henning, who came in 30th, sophomore Julia Roundtree, who came in 41st (19:34), and junior Marissa Jelks, who placed 51st (19:56).

Monaco's 18:09 now holds the 16th place spot on the all-time SIU list, surpassing Leahy's 18:10.36, which was run at last season's Saluki Invitational.

list as a freshman, is now tied with Sally Zack's 1984 time of 18:11 in the 18th spot on the top-20 all-time list.

Even though Simone's time was impressive, she knows her best performance is yet to come.

"My goal [is to score a time] under 18 minutes. I think I have a good chance," she said. "I may start off slow, but I have a lot of energy to work my way up."

Simone said she would have placed higher, but a cramp in her lower abdomen at the 500-meter mark slowed her down.

"[Simone] went out and maintained the race," Monaco said of her teammate's running. "She kept up and had an impressive performance improving from last week."

Several members on the team improved their times from last week's season opener. Simone had the greatest enhancement, cutting 42 seconds off her time. Meanwhile, Roundtree had a 41-second improvement.

DeNoon said the Saluki times are getting better because of the progression in practice, and is optimistic the team's times will continue to improve as the season continues.

"Hopefully, [the women] can improve their times by 30 to 40 seconds," DeNoon said. "If so, we could be a top notch team."

Gateway will be true measuring stick for Salukis

Two weeks of the 1999 college football season are complete, and SIU is 2-0 — a pleasant surprise, but what does that mean for the rest of the season? Are the Salukis to be taken seriously?

Clearly, the defense had better refocus after a weak second half performance during the 58-51 shoot-out win over Murray State University Saturday, but Saluki fans have just cause to be excited about their team.

Considering SIU's offense has amassed an incredible-101 points in its first two games, it's pretty evident that SIU has a Potete — or is that potent — offense.

Saluki quarterback Sherard Potete looks super; the Saluki wide receivers are all they were cracked up to be; and freshman running back Tom Koutsos appears ready to resurrect the Saluki rushing attack from the dead.

Yet, the Salukis are still likely to receive the Rodney "no respect" Dangerfield treatment from cynics regarding their outlook for a successful year — and with legitimate reason.

The fact that SIU has had a grand total of one winning season since 1986 is not the issue here. The problem is, what many football observers predicted in the preseason has already been confirmed in the early stages of the 1999 season — the Gateway Conference is loaded.

Not to be a killjoy, but it is probably worth mentioning that SIU has not yet played a conference game — which would not really be noteworthy, except that the usually difficult Gateway looks like it will be especially brutal this season.

Looking up and down the league, it's not too early to say the Salukis will be up to their ears in stiff competition whenever they line up against a conference foe. Suffice it to say, SIU will be forced to earn everything they get.

The Gateway, which is perennially one of the top Division I-AA leagues in the country, has waged a relentless assault on non-conference opponents thus far in '99. So far, the Gateway is 10-4, good for a winning percentage of .714. At that pace, the league will enjoy its best season ever.

What separates the league's start from impressive to downright phenomenal is that all four losses the Gateway has suffered have come at the hands of Division I-A teams.

In other words, no Gateway team has fallen to one of their Division I-AA peers through two weeks of action.

Speaking of which, the Gateway also boasts two victories over Division I-A teams,
